Read the text and answer the questions

THE TEXT

① I'll never forget the day when one of my ten-year-old students shyly raised his hand and said that he had never received a gift. We were discussing a reading story about a boy who was not going to get anything for his birthday. Jace's honesty surprised the whole class. Was he exaggerating? He was not the type. Then I remembered that Jace was from a poor family and that his father didn't have a permanent job.

② A couple of weeks later, Jace was absent from school. This happened to be the period of the classroom gift exchange. Traditionally, each pupil had to bring a gift for another pupil. As we were talking about the event, one of the pupils suggested that we buy gifts for Jace instead.

③ With great excitement, the gifts began to come in. I remember being so proud of my thoughtful, selfless and helpful students. After several days of absences, we learned that Jace moved away because his father lost his job. I decided to call Jace and I explained the story to him. Then I drove to his house and together, we filled the room with all the wrapped gifts. He was so surprised and grateful.

④ As I went to sleep that night, I thought about my students and I was thankful to be a part of one of the most important "lessons" of their lives.
